Cleveland, Ohio (July 10, 2013) - Art in the Village will return in the fall due to the overwhelming response that Legacy Village received from festival patrons asking for an additional show after the event in June. Art in the Village: The Fall Art Festival is slated for September 22 - 23, 2013. Festival-goers will have the opportunity to welcome back some of their favorite artists and meet new and emerging talent. A wide array of original artwork will be on display and available for sale. The artistic media will include paintings, sculptures, photography, ceramics, glass, wood, handmade jewelry, collages and mixed media, with prices are set to suit all budgets. Admission is free and open to the public.

"We are thrilled to return to Legacy Village," says festival promoter Howard Alan. "We take pride in producing high-end juried art shows and present a truly diverse group of leading artists from around the country with their finest work. Our shows appeal to art enthusiasts and collectors as well as the casual shopper looking for unique gifts and we just couldn't ignore their request for a second show this fall."

Those attending the art show will be able to register to win artwork by an exhibiting artist. No purchase is necessary to participate in the giveaway.
